Each round starts by making a bet. Since most crash betting games are crypto-based, players can place wagers as small as $0.01, but that mainly depends on the platform you select.

Once the betting round is over, you'll see a multiplier that increases as time passes by. The more you wait, the higher the multiplier will be.

However, there's a trick — the game will "crash" at random, and you'll lose your bet. Therefore, the goal is to cash out your profit before the crash takes place.

Sometimes, the crash might happen right away. Still, on rare occasions, prizes can be multiplied hundreds of times.

As you can see, playing crash games is much easier compared to many other gambling games online, as you basically only need to place a bet and decided when to cash out. Once the round is over, a new betting round will start, and you'll have some time to place a new bet.

Many crash games let you place an automatic bet or even set the automatic cash-out. For instance, you can instruct the game to cash out automatically whenever the multiplier gets past 5x.

Each crash game might have slightly different autoplay settings, and we recommend exploring them before making your first bet.

Simply put, automatic betting rounds will stop if you make a profit you've entered on Stop on Profit or if you lose the amount entered in the Stop on Loss field.
