Real money online casino app

I never take the time to do this, and never thought I would for a play store casino app, but my conscience would not leave it alone. Most if not all slots-centered, casino-like, apps in which you pay to play by buying their in-house money or chips, are pretty aggressive in their tactics to get you to make purchases, and in some, yes I've tried a few, your luck is kinda dictated by those purchases. Now I have to say that if there was one app, I feel has worked HARD to earn those in-apps is this one. This is, by far, not only the most fancy, entertaining, fun, story-driven, bonus-packed, and what seems to me, very fair and appreciative of the time you put into, whatever pandemic or convalescence the reason behind it. Now, the reason I discovered it and the one I'm most appreciative of is how, they've kept someone, who is endearing to me, was at some point very much obsessed with real life casinos, and so on. Now she's gotten over that and her health prevents her, in part, from going back to that life in which "fun" became "excess" and "addiction", and this app I guess helps feed that hunger a bit, but in a harmless and hopefully, little by little, will help her make the transition to these types of casinos. So yeah my two cents, I'll be making a purchase soon and every so often if only because they didn't push me as hard or at all, and to say, in a way, thank you.

Caesars Online Casino is a bit unique in that it offers vastly different deals depending on what state you're in. For example, a player in New Jersey can get a $10 no-deposit bonus and a 200% deposit match up to $200. Meanwhile, a player in Michigan can't get a no-deposit bonus but does have access to a 100% deposit match up to a massive $2,000. Why are they so different? It's the same reason a brick-and-mortar Caesars Entertainment casino in Indiana will have different promotions than a brick-and-mortar Caesars Entertainment casino in Atlantic City. The number of potential customers, competition from other in-state online casinos, and other factors determine the best deal specific to the market.
