There are plenty of supplier choices for consumers, many of which do not enjoy the benefits, or the associated costs, of holding a licence from the Gambling Commission: illegal bookies, gambling dens, poker "clubs", and of course many thousands of online gambling websites the best online rated casinos in unregulated, or at least inadequate regulated, jurisdictions. It is worth remembering that in the early days of online gambling, many gambling operators with household names thought that they had an immediate advantage in this nascent business. They quickly discovered their mistake. The only factors consumers were interested in were (a) whether they would get paid if they won, and (b) who offered the best value for money: the name was irrelevant. In the same way, consumers are unlikely to choose their supplier because one company has a better consumer protection policy than the other.
