The presence of an illegal casino is a sign that "the police are not watching". If the casino can operate with impunity then so can others. The more people who gamble at an illegal gaming establishment, the more likely some of them are active criminals. Gamblers already take risks. Criminals take even more risks, and now they are gambling in uninhibited environments.

Try your luck with 2,700+ slot machines, including classic favorites, automated tables and the newest game titles.

It makes sense that federal law chooses to ignore petty gambling. If your kids run a game for a couple of weeks and only a couple hundred dollars is exchanged, they aren't risking federal prosecution. I gambled with my friends when I was a kid, but only occasionally. But even in states that don't prohibit home games, if 5 people gamble regularly for a year that's illegal. Maybe the F.B.I. won't be knocking down your door, but you're running an underground casino. Remember to share that at confession.
